

How Far Will We Go To Help?

Syrian Refugees Need Us

By: Abdul-Kareem Nahlawi

Who Are They?

Innocent people

Rejected by many of their own people

How they can benefit the country

In need of our help

Friend or Foe?

They are the victims, not the terrorists

Over 13.5 million Syrian Refugees are in need of assistance

According to statistics, refugees pose pra our safety

Rejected By Many, Accepted By Few

The countries that have accepted Syrian Refugees

The countries that have rejected Syrian Refugees

Why they have rejected them

Why they have accepted them

What Are the Benefits?

Syrian refugees have a broad range of helpful skills

They positively contribute to the countries they migrate to by...

Increasing economic growth

Expanding the tax base for the government

They fortify the economy

By allowing refugees into the country, they are safe

to start a new life

a chance

If We Won't Help Them, Then Who Will?

Over 465,000 Syrian refugees have died so far

They have limited food and medical supplies

6 million Syrians are still displaced in Syria- half of which are children

Children are at high risk of becoming ill, exploited, abused, and malnourished

Families can barely make it alive and migrating is often fatal

Millions of refugees need our help, $4.5 billion was necessitated to do the bare minimum of helping the Syrians in need, but only $2.9 billion was obtained,

What Can We Do To Help?
